What are the connections between the mobility of people, films and cultures? And how do these movements across borders take part in the hybrid histories, politics and communities of Latin-America?

The "Cine/Mobility" on-line film festival is an academic and curatorial project exploring multiple paths of mobility and border crossing between Latin-America and across the Atlantic, focusing on stories and experiences of migration, community-making, solidarity and resistance.

The festival consists of two strands: a program of virtual screenings and a series of round tables with film professionals and stakeholders. "Cine/Mobility" offers a complex understanding of the relationship between cinema and border crossing, and its political, economic, and cultural consequences by stimulating a dialogue between specialised audiences, professionals and academics.

Informations pratiques :

The festival consists of two strands: a program of virtual screenings, Q&As and a series of round tables with filmmakers, curators, activists and film programmers. All events are free. Check out the full program on the website, and book a place via Eventbrite.
