

Master Class (Copenhagen) 2025, formation en urbanisme cyclable

This year is the 10th anniversary of our bicycle urbanism Master Class! While we have seen impressive progress across Copenhagen remains a world leader in cycling infrastructure design, policy, and services. To celebrate these changing bicycle urbanism around the world, Copenhagenize is offering a new specialized technical course focused on infrastructure data and observation to meet the users' needs. This intensive three-day immersive course will spotlight Copenhagen's a classroom for experiencing and learning. In a city where cycling is second nature, Copenhagen is an obvious choice. The winding streets in the historic center are one thing, but the majority of this sprawling European capital features wide countless city streets in the world. It is here, like no other city in the world, where inspiration for a bicycle future is shown on infrastructure planning and design on full display, the city shows us visions of how other cities can continue moving to a scaled future. Along with gaining a deep understanding of the ongoing transformation of Copenhagen, this new Master Class covers technical aspects of bicycle infrastructure design, keeping a clear focus on a user-oriented approach and traffic safety, bicycle desire lines and data collection methodologies that allow cities to respond to users' needs. Join the Master Class in creating a bicycle-friendly city, going from the macro level all the way down to the micro details.
